City's utility bills could soar because of new system

SANDRA M STANWAY BROOKS BULLETIN

The city plans to apply for a provincial water/ wastewater partnership grant to construct a new wastewater facility with utility bills expected to reflect this change starting in January 2025.

The city's average effluent quality values exceeded the wastewater systems effluent regulations and they did receive a transitional authorization to set site-specific effluent

In 2016 the city failed to meet the transitional authorization limits and were not allowed to discharge any deleterious substances in 2017 but the city continued with normal practices and discharged effluent containing some level of deleterious substances which was in contravention of provincial regulations.

In 2018 the city received written warning of contravention of the Fisheries Act and the Wastewater System Effluent Regulations.

City CA0 Chris Parker stated that the effluent quality-related contraventions are largely unavoidable given the lack of operational flexibility to improve the treatment.

It has been determined maintaining conventional lagoon system is not practical as it requires additional land for storage cells and the EID would like to see the city find an alternative method.

"Therefore, the ability to effectively handle, treat and dispose of wastewater presently and for future growth is becoming increasingly important for long term viability of the region," he reported.

During the committee meeting last week Parker discussed the two systems - magna and mechanical - that the city has considered over the years for its wastewater system.

One system looked at is the magna system which is a new process that hasn't been proven. A study estimates that the cost for the system and a future upgrade would exceed $30 million and an annual operation and maintenance price tag of approximately $900,000.

The traditional wastewater system, which administration has recommended, is a membrane reactor which is estimated at $29 million. It would offer a more straightforward approach for handling increases in effluent and it can be upgraded with minimal changes.

The city would be eligible for a 25 per cent grant under the program.

If the final cost of the project is $29 million and if the city receives a grant of $7.250 million the balance of $21.750 million would be borne by the taxpayers through the utility bills rather than a general tax increase.

"It would administration's recommendation that the increases are included in the 2025 utility rates starting in January," Parker submitted to city committee.

"The 10 year capital forecast, as it's predicated now, has a $30 million worth of debentures involved and assumes around $60 million of grants that haven't been applied for yet," said Bill McKennan, the city's finance director.

"Needless to say the rates would have to go up substantially. The good news is they are starting from a relatively low base compared to other municipalities.

"There is room to move there but it is going to look like large increases but compared to other communities it would be bringing rates up to the norm. There will be some challenges, needless to say," he said.

Last year, the average utility rate was $132.50 which had been an annual increase of $31.26.

An analysis of the implications of the major projects that are in the 10 year capital plan will be part of the budget.

City taxpayers should expect an increase in 2025

SANDRA M STANWAY BROOKS BULLETIN

City council has yet to determine next year's tax rate, however, a jump is expected due to the number of projects in the works.

During Monday's council meeting finance director Bill McKennan noted that last year's three year budget forecast estimated a 5.38 per cent increase in 2025.

"These estimates are being updated to reflect new information and the impacts of various capital initiatives undertaken and funded primarily by new debentures being issued," he noted.

The city tax rates continue to be impacted by the RCMP. Residents have been paying more over the past couple of years in preparation of the population reaching 15,000 by 2027. Once it reaches that number the city will receive a lower subsidy from the province according to the federal-provincial policing agreement.

Some of the big ticket items that may affect 2025 rates include the $1.5 million skateboard park, which was budgeted last year but there will likely be a discussion to expand the park to include a sport court and parking, the new wastewater treatment plant will impact utility bills starting in January although no tender will be issued until much later in either 2025 or 2026 and the new public works building will also be tendered.

Wednesday the On city's Municipal Planning Commission was expected to approve the new $13.800 million facility to be constructed on the existing site at 2nd Ave and 7th Street West.

Additional costs regarding the old rodeo grounds are currently unknown. Despite the fact the city owns the property other costs are expected to impact the future construction of a school.

piece of ground with the exception of the boathouse facility."

The agreement will be a legal document that will be registered against the title so if the land is sold the road access condition will remain in place.

administration County also sought council's OK to spend up to $20,000 to cover the cost of the agreement which councillor Dan Short questioned.

He said it seems as if money was given to them to fix the launch and now they want more for the legal fees.

'Not a very 'partnery' way to do things to get one guy to pay all the bills. There's benefit for him as well whether he wants to admit it or not. In a partnership he should be paying his side, I think," he said.

CAO Matt Fenske explained that last year the condition of the funding was that there is public access across the private land to the launch.

'The condition placed on those funds actually being spent was that the public would have access. To guarantee that we have to go through a legal process and it costs money. That's what that issue is. If public funds are being spent to approve that boat launch the public needs access to the boat launch for the life of the boat launch," he said.

Councillor Greg Skriver said the boat launch is a vital piece of infrastructure to the county and the growth of Lake Newell Resort depends on the marina.

"I don't want you to say that the county is flipping the bill for this because we're not. It's in conjunction with the EID, the landowner and the marina association are flipping the bill for this," he said.

Johnson told council the estimated cost for the entire project is $500,000. The marina association has spent $350,000 to upgrade the boat slips and the wharfs.

An updated agreement between the EID and the property owner for placement of the marina on the district's shoreline will also be signed with the EID paying for the agreement.

Johnson said, marina association is a nonprofit organization that is run by volunteers and they've got limited access to funds and definitely need help to secure public access across private property."

The association will seek other grants.

COMMENT

Liberal-NDP pension scam will cost Canadians millions

LORNE GUNTER TORONTO SUN

Apparently, in March of this year, Liberal parliamentarians invited NDP MPs to a closed-door meeting at which they conspired to move next year's election date back a week.

A week's delay isn't much. What's the big deal?

Well, it's not the principal, it's the money.

The Liberals and New Democrats concocted their plan to move the election from Oct. 20 to Oct. 27, just so 28 of their caucus mates would qualify for MP pensions of about $78,000 a year.

Members of Parliament must serve at least six years in order for their pensions to vest fully. For those MPs first elected in 2019, Oct. 20 would be a day or two too early. Therefore, for them to "earn" their full, tax-supported, lifelong payouts, they would have to be in office another week.

Then, in order to cover their tracks in this little plot, the two parties came up with the excuse that next year, the festival of Diwali will fall on Oct. 20. The Liberals and New Democrats claimed it wouldn't be fair to Hindus, Sikhs and Buddhists for whom Diwali is a cultural celebration.

There was, though, no discussion of the fact that, if the original voting date was kept, the last week of campaigning would conflict with Thanksgiving 2025, or that Alberta municipal elections were also scheduled to be held Oct. 20.

Just Diwali was offered up as the excuse, undoubtedly because, in an 'Aha!' moment, the Liberals and New Democrats thought they had found the perfect multicultural screen for their little pension subterfuge.

It's not much of a stretch to imagine one of the secret plotters exclaiming, "Hey, guys, if anyone calls us out on this, we'll just label them racists. That always works!"

I'm guessing Quebec Liberal MP Sherry Romanado thought she'd come up with the perfect 'Gotcha!' moment this week when the Liberal-Lefty scheme was raised at the House Affairs Committee of the Commons.

"There are 32 Conservatives who were elected in 2019 who would benefit from this, too," Romanado is reported as having said by Blacklock's Reporter.

Yes, Ma'am, you're right. There are 32 Conservatives in the Class of '19. But they are not likely to get punted by voters next election the way most Liberals and many Dippers are. The Conservatives are likely to be around another four years, so the date change is unlikely to affect their pension eligibility, one way or the other.

Besides, Conservative MPs voted against the bill to change the election date.

If this proposal was designed out of cultural sensitivity and not just money-grubbing, why were only Liberals and New Democrats invited behind the curtain?

Not even Bloc MPs were invited. If the meeting had no nefarious motives, why the cloak-and-dagger routine?

This kind of 'We'll scratch your backs if you'll scratch ours' mentality is proof the Liberal-NDP non-aggression pact is back on, at least informally.

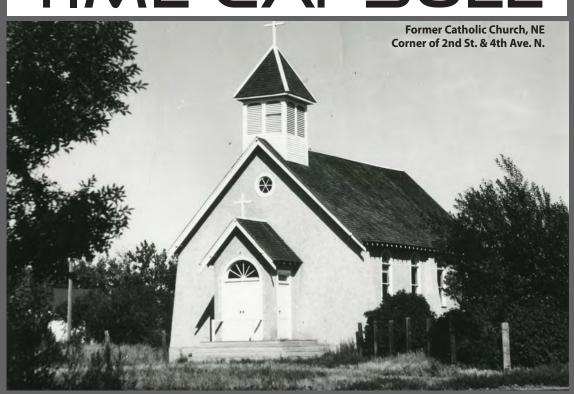

Frankly, the Liberals and the New Democrats are so alike mentally and ideologically that they don't need a formal agreement to think and act (to spend and tax) together.

Although NDP Leader Jagmeet Singh made a big deal in early September of tearing up his formal supply-and-confidence agreement keeping the Justin Trudeau government in power, there has not been a moment since when the Liberals were in any danger of falling as a result of the NDP voting against them.

Indeed, this week, after the Bloc failed to extort pension and marketing board concessions from the Liberals, and Bloc Leader Yves-Francois Blanchet threatened to pull the government down, there was trusty old Singh saying Canadians didn't want him to force an early election.

Pension revelations could cost taxpayers $4.7 million a year. That's a good example of the high cost of the continuing Trudeau-Singh coalition.

TIME CAPSULE

Botswana and America: Different Elections

Botswana's elections have always been seen as a model for Africa, but the one last week has a somewhat wider relevance. The way its politicians handled victory and defeat could serve as a model for politicians in the United States.

Botswana has been democratic since it got its independence from Britain in 1966, and for all that time it has been governed by the same party, the Botswana Democratic Party. Now the BDP has finally lost power – and there has been no uproar, no claims and counter-claims, no crisis.

There has been no major political violence in Botswana's past, nor did the BDP have a history of heroic struggle for independence against evil oppressors. When the British declared that they were leaving the BDP won the first free election, and Sir Seretse Khama, descended from local royalty, was elected president.

He kept getting elected until his death in 1980, and other BDP leaders followed in his wake (including his own son Ian in 2008-2018) all the way down to last Friday. But Botswana remained a democracy and the country prospered thanks to a small population (2.6 million), a large number of high-end tourists, and diamond mines.

In a continent where most governments are bad and most elections are rigged, Botswana has been an island of domestic peace and democratic rule. It has some major advantages, however. 80% of its population belongs to the same ethnic group (Tswana), which is rare in Africa. It is also a welfare state, which is even rarer.

Even after 58 years in power, therefore, the BDP's defeat in last week's election came as a shock. It was largely due to a high level of joblessness among young people. There's lots of money sloshing around, but diamond-mining doesn't create much employment and the young are frustrated even though they are not going hungry.

The BDP's share of the vote in recent elections has been just above 50%, so its defeat should not have come as a surprise, but few people were old enough to remember a time when it had not been running the country. Despite all the signs, the BDP was psychologically unprepared for defeat.

So what did President Mokgweetsi Masisi do when the votes were counted? He called up Duma Boku, the leader of the victorious Umbrella for Democratic Change (UDC), to congratulate him, of course. That's what the defeated candidates in an election are expected to do in a democracy.

Afterwards, Masisi confessed to a press conference that his party "got it wrong big time. I will respectfully step aside and participate in a smooth transition process ahead of inauguration. I am proud of our democratic processes and I respect the will of the people."

"What has happened today takes our democracy to a higher level," replied Duma Boko. "It now means we've seen a successful, peaceful, orderly democratic transition." That's how responsible grown-ups behave in a democracy, even if it's the first time power has changed hands in 58 years.

Why is this a relevant topic for today? Because the United States, far bigger, much richer and with several centuries' experience of democracy, is holding an election this week, and a significant number of Americans fear that it could lead to a civil war.

I don't know the outcome of Tuesday's vote as I write this, but a civil war certainly wouldn't happen if Donald Trump won the election. There would be great concern that a second term for Trump could greatly damage American democracy and civil rights in particular, but his opponents would realise that violence would just make matters worse.

The bigger risk is an electoral defeat for Trump, because he would be certain to claim that is fraudulent whether he truly believes it or not. Even then a full-scale civil war would be unlikely, but the United States is a heavily armed society where violence is, in H. Rap Brown's formula, "as American as apple pie."

Botswana is not that sort of place. Most countries aren't. But while political issues in the United States are much the same as they are in other developed countries, the ideological passion that Americans bring to them has always been off the scale.

Consider, for example, the issue of slavery. Both the United States and the United Kingdom were deeply in the slave trade for a long time, but when the British finally realised it was wrong they just bought the slave-owners out.

When a majority of Americans reached the same conclusion thirty years later, it set off a civil war that killed at least three-quarters of a million soldiers (about 2% of the population at that time). The policy differences at issue in this election are not very different from those elsewhere, but Americans have whipped themselves into an existential frenzy about them.

ONE TREE - Well, we have had some reasonable weather the past week and I'd like to see it stay that way for a while longer, as I'm sure there are a few folks that would like that too, as I see there is still some combining left to do yet.

Last week, I forgot to mention that I had the pleasure of having Rena Urban of Red Deer and her daughter Kathy Kuhn of Sylvan Lake come and have supper with me on the afternoon and evening of October 22nd. We had a good visit together and caught up on a lot of happenings in the area. They had come down to meet with her brother Gib and his wife Shirley Rempel of Medicine Hat for lunch earlier in the day and visited with them, then later came to my place. It was really nice to see them.

I didn't have as many ghosts and goblins for Halloween as other years, I guess the kids are growing up and many of them go to town and going out with their friends instead of coming by. I only had seven, where other years I've had 12-14. I did have bags but maybe I won't bother next year. It's kind of neat to see their costumes.

Sorry folks, I won't have much this week as I totally forgot about collecting news Sunday evening till it was too

I'd been busy with appointments and doing things for the Fall tea, and for others and my work got left behind. So I've been busy trying to catch up on my outside work before winter sets in. Thanks to Mack and Kirsten Edwards for putting up my snow fences last Friday. I really appreciated it.

She says "You'd better write it down or you'll forget." He says "I ain't going to forget it!" He went to the store, came back after a bit later with a paper bag. As We Remember

DEVOTIONAL THOUGHT OF THE WEEK

EID MINISTERIAL ASSOC.

DAVID BRADFORD BROOKS ALLIANCE CHURCH

As we approach the season of Remembrance Day, it is a time where we pause and reflect on those who have gone before us. Every year on November 11, Canadians pause in a silent moment of remembrance for the men and women who have served, and continue to serve our country during times of war, conflict and peace.

As Canadians, we have much to be thankful for. We are blessed to live in such a great country and we can thank those who have gone before us who sacrificed so much to help preserve what we are grateful to enjoy.

Christians, As we should also have a posture of remembrance for the freedoms we enjoy. As Jesus ate His final supper with His disciples, and He broke the bread, He said this to them: "This is my body given for you; do this in remembrance of me" (Luke 22:19). Paul, in his letter to the church in Corinth, retells the story of this last supper and we hear again that when we have communion together, we do so "in remembrance of" Jesus (1 Corinthians 11:25).

And what do we remember? remember the sacrifice of Iesus on the cross to forgive our sins, and the freedom that comes through Jesus. Paul, in a letter to another church in Galatia, writes this: "It is for freedom that Christ has set us free....' (Galatians 5:1).

Just can be thankful and remember how we get to walk in and enjoy the freedom we enjoy and have as Canadians, as Christians we also need to be thankful and remember the freedom we get to enjoy and walk in because of Jesus and what He has done for us.

May we never forget, and may we live with hearts full of gratitude for all that has been done to provide us with the freedom we experience.

Roadrunners advance to bantam provincials

Provincials are Nov. 9 at 6 p.m. in Medicine Hat...

SANDRA M STANWAY BROOKS BULLETIN

The drought is over. After two consecutive years of league playoff losses the Brooks Roadrunners have been crowned the 2024 Rangeland Football Conference champions and will head to the provincials.

The Roadrunners will face Red Deer's Hunting Hills Lightning of the Central Alberta league on Saturday in Medicine Hat. Kick off is at 6 p.m.

The Roadrunners were undefeated during regular season and last Thursday they defeated the Medicine Hat Colts 36-8 for

It has been a long time coming. "I'm happy and the boys are happy. They were pretty excited," said head coach Mark Freeman.

He said the kids took the field but they were pretty nervous and fumbled the ball a number of times in their first possession before they were able to get into

to. "They actually persevered quite a bit which was great. They hadn't had to do that much this year. They showed they could handle a bit of pressure which is awesome," he said.

Jamal Yuye had four touchdowns and a field goal and Austin Popeniuk had a touchdown.

'We played excellent on defence. The only reason (Colts) scored is because we had some penalty issues."

He told the team to play the game they know they can play.

"Às soon as Jamal got his first touchdown he turned into a different player altogether. His confidence came back. They just need to experience a bit of success and then they know what they're doing again."

He said the final game showed them they still need to work on some things including passing and keeping control of the ball so this week's practices will be refining their game.

Bassano gets outdoor ice rink

Bassano's has temporary ice rink thanks to the Bassano Fire Rapid Response Society.

Previously, the department set up boards and poly but this year the society set up a full rink.

The society was started just prior to COVID which left delays in fundraising. This year they managed to raise the funds to install the rink beside the community hall.

"The rink is by no means complete. There is still a lot more work to be done. Currently the outline of the rink is ready but the end result will have arena height boards the entire way around as well as netting at both ends to help keep pucks in the skating area," said Kayla Cochrane via text.

Funds raised by the society will go back into the community that has made the project a possibility.

Cochrane said there will be benches and rubber mats have been installed. Hockey nets have also been purchased.

As well, FCSS has received funding for equipment that can be borrowed including skates, helmets, sticks and skating aids.

The remainder of the rink will be set up when the weather turns colder.

"Kaiden Clarke led the team as quarterback all year as a force and a true leader," said head coach Jerrod Maxwell-Lyster.

He added that Dallas Alberts and Kaiden Clarke were a menace on defensive line, Josh Alimi showed that he can tackle and not just run fast.

Kingston Bolt made "highlight reel" catches all year and was tough on defense.

Blake Jennings covered receivers well all season and was also a positive leader.

There was a lot of depth on the team which will bode well not only for players who will run with the Roadrunners next year but also Grade 6 players who will continue as Badgers.

Players who will advance to the Roadrunners next year include Alberts, Bolt, Isaac Cachen, Calpas, Clarke, Festa, Helland, Hofmann Jennings, Metheral and Maxwell-Lyster.

WARDLOW - We had a quick trip to Stony Plain on Friday to deliver some large wagon wheels, and pick up a purchase that John had made, so I decided to order some bear making parts from a company there that sells them. We met up with my sister Trudy who lives near Drayton Valley. She took the wheels as they were for a friend of hers, and she had lunch with us. We ate at a place called Bings Chinese, her choice. While we were waiting for her to arrive she called and asked if we were at Bings in Stony as she was waiting at Bings in Spruce Grove. We were unaware there were two of them.

It was so nice to see her even for such a quick visit. Friday the 8th the BCCS will have its annual Remembrance Day service at 10 AM everyone is welcome to attend.

Christmas is really coming fast and there are so many craft sales to attend, it seems they are starting earlier and earlier every year, we have always, for a least the last 30+ years, had our annual WI sale about a month before Christmas on a Friday. This year it's on the 22 of November from 10-4: 30 keeping in mind the WI always serves a reasonable lunch at our sale. We are known to be good cooks. Remember to shop locally for the things you can.

Next week we are going to see Jake in the Jersey Boys play it as been sold out since before it opened actually a couple days after tickets went on sale.

Local Boy Has Completed 42 Flights Over Enemy Territory

Flt.-Lieut. Stuart Bruce Has Seen Many Local Boys In Overseas Theatre

"It has been quite an experience seeing Europe and North Africa, but the old home town looks pretty good to me," said Flight-Lieutenant Stuart Bruce, R.C.A.F., home in Brooks on leave after 31/2 years overseas. Stuart is the younger of two flying brothers; Earl is with the fighter command and was stationed in Ceylon when last heard from.

Stuart is still only 21 years old, but has seen more of the world than most will ever see. A heavyhomber pilot, he has been in action from bases in England and North Africa. A tall, dark, handsome lad, he is very reluctant to give more than a general account of the many exciting tales he has

He completed his first "tour" of operational flying (30 trips) in July, 1943, then was posted as an instructor in England for a year. He had just completed 12 trips of his second tour when his plane was forced down and he spent three months as a "walking case" in a hospital. SEES MANY

"Stewie" has seen most of the boys who have enlisted from Brooks and district and landed overseas. Each time it was a breath from home, he says, and a bright spot in a day's work.

He was stationed in North Africa following the big invasion of that continent. Then he was also on several of the shuttle-bombing trips from Britain to Africa, piloting a heavy bomber, and also had one trip to India, where he spent about ten days.

Stuart seems to have flying in his blood now, and is full of praise for the big four-motored British bombers. Their performance, he says, will fill many books when the war is over.

Although he is enjoying his leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stuart, he is anxious to get back for another crack at the Jerry, a bitter, relentless foe who must be ground to earth, in his opinion.

Remembrance Day

Local airman among 12,000 celebrated for service and sacrifice

SUBMITTED BY LISA CHRISTENSEN

Until a month ago, Flt. Lt. Peter G. Christensen did not have a final resting place. Although he had flown across Canada and around the world as an RCAF pilot, there was no gravestone anywhere to mark his passing in Brooks, Alberta after January 31, 2010.

A native of Jenner, born to Danish farmer Hans Peder Christensen and nurse/midwife Blanche Gilfillan, Dad enlisted in the RCAF in 1944. He re-enlisted after the end of WWII and was posted across Canada, lastly at CFB Trenton, before moving to Brooks in 1964, near his Christensen and Brodie family. (Daughter Linda Redelback still resides there, with husband Garry).

One day, while still training in Alberta, he swooped low over the family farm in Jenner, dropping this cheery navigational map to his folks. His sister, June Edwards, later signed it and gave it to him as a keepsake. Sixty years later, a neighbour's daughter contacted niece, Pat Block, daughter of Walt Christensen. Eleanor MacArthur, 89, and now living in the Hat, recalled the day that big plane flew over Richard and Cora Hansen's farm too, and waggled its wings at them all.

Dad met Mom – it was over the air. She was a wireless operator AOS#2 Edmonton transmitting to pilots. They met and married in Montreal that same year.

2024 is the 100th anniversary of the Royal Canadian Air Force. Peter's daughter, Lisa, son-inlaw Bruce and grandson Brendan Logan attended the commemorative airshow at Trenton, before touring the National Air Force Museum of Canada. On September 28th they returned to the Museum for its 40th anniversary Ad Astra Dedication Ceremony. The Ad Astra Stone Program celebrates the service and sacrifice of the over 12,000 air force personnel whose legacy is preserved in the RCAF Memorial Airpark. But Peter's stone, unlike nearly everyone else's, was still not in place. Instead, it was front and centre at the ceremony, in front of the podium, where tributes were paid to the lives and sacrifices of the thousands of Canadian air force personnel whose contributions still resonate within their families and communities. A formation of C-130 Hercules then roared over the gathering in a fitting tribute by pilots now based at Trenton.

Last month, F/Lt. Peter Christensen made a last symbolic flight back to Trenton, His stone joined others from 436 Squadron in the museum's airpark, amongst 28 aircraft, the best place of all for a man who loved to fly.

* The next day, sixty years after our fathers were "retired" from the RCAF, I met the daughter of Dad's fellow pilot, Bill Palidwar, who flew with Bomber Command in WWII, for the first time. and posed together with our fathers' photographs.

End Celebrated Quietly In District War's Holiday marks defeat of Japanese; town quiet

Thanksgiving Service, Sport Program, Baseball, Two Dances Mark V-J Day

Although news of Japan's final surrender came as an anticlimax to a tense weekend of waiting, citizens of Brooks and district heard the broadcast here at 5:00 p.m. Tuesday with a general feeling of "let's celebrate." The ensuing day and a half of gaiety was one of the most spontaneous celebrations ever seen here and was entirely free of any rowdyism. The fire siren was blown shortly after news of the surrender was received, and the big fire engine roared out to a victory dance as a public address system mounted on a truck toured the residential sections. A huge crowd that evening packed the curling rink to mark the end of the world war.

On Wednesday, official V-J day, a community service of thanksgiving on the horticultural station lawn was led by Rev. Allan Dixon. Introductory remarks were made by Mayor George E. Smith, and a program of children's sports followed.

In the evening the Patricia Oilers ball team met the Brooks nine on the local diamonds and an interesting contest resulted in a 2-2 draw. One of the largest crowds ever gathered at a ball game here was on hand at the fairground.

Another free dance was held Wednesday evening and again local citizens flocked to the popular centre to join the merriment.

Every business place, including restaurants, was locked up tight all day Wednesday. Local Chinese, many of whom are anxiously awaiting word from relatives in their war-torn country, were perhaps happiest celebrants.

Sheep ranching empires in the Old American West... size of industry challenged cattle culture mythology

Whilst travelling the wide-open San Valley in southwest Colorado, one notes roadside signs acknowledging the historic role of the once enormous Hispanicdominated sheep grazing industry in the area. The vast numbers were eye-opening, with one sign mentioning a long-ago loss of a 3,500 flock in a sandstorm. One also notices the presence of old wool collection warehouses along a railway line. Yet today, in this vast area, sheep flocks of any size are rarely seen - albeit not many cattle either. This historic Colorado curiosity was revealed in a book "The Wooly West" by Andrew Gulliford. It's a remarkably insightful detailed book describing the sheep industry's historic role in Colorado and the adjacent American States.

Large-scale sheep grazing was pioneered by Hispanic families in the 1700s; they were the first non-indigenous settlers in the area. Hispanic families and subsequent Basque, Spanish and Greek immigrant settlers became the West's principal sheep owners and herders to this day. Due to the favourable geography, sheepvegetation, preferred climate and grazing logistics, much of the western slopes of the Colorado Rockies were soon inundated with hundreds of thousands of sheep in the general area. The expansion was mindboggling and happened over a relatively short period – about 50 years. One ponders how this happened.

It was all about money sheep in the American West between 1860 and 1930 consistently made fortunes for their owners. Unlike cattle, where open-range steers took 4 years to be ready for market, sheep had an immediate return on their investment from the annual wool and fat lamb crops. Wool was the real money-maker – prices averaged 50 to 80 cents a pound – ironically, that was much more money than wool is worth today. Add in lamb sales, and sheep were profitable indeed.

Real money was made in low production costs sheepherders cost $30 a month, and grazing land was free until the late 1890s. The latter is where sheepmen came into conflict with cattlemen both competed for free grazing on the same public lands. In most of the American West, public land was open to unregulated free grazing by anyone with a herd of cattle or a flock of sheep. The inevitable was bound to happen - massive overgrazing occurred that destroyed millions of acres of native grasses and forbs that have not recovered to this day.

Wars broke between cowboys and sheepherders, with the latter getting the worst of the carnage. An estimated 500 to 600 mainly anonymous sheepherders were killed by murderous cattlemen. Herders were at a disadvantage. They were usually alone on the range and were mostly illiterate young Hispanics or Basque and Greek immigrants, most of whom spoke little English. It got so bad that wealthy sheep owners once marched a flock of 21,000 sheep and 100 armed riders straight through prime cattle grazing areas as a show of strength.

By the late 1890s, also armed owners herders with the latest Winchester rifles and pistols to shoot back at marauding cowboys. Yes, there was a wild west in the mountains of Colorado, Utah and Wyoming. The range wars ended in the early 1900s when the US Forest Service took over range management, and cattle and sheep owners were allotted specific grazing permits. It was also the first time sheep and cattle owners became united in their outrage against the US federal government - for the first time, both groups had to pay grazing fees for public land use.

However, the end came quickly for big sheep flocks grazing in the Colorado mountains. Synthetics killed the price of wool forever, and the changing mandate of managing public lands favoured conservation and recreational use over sheep and cattle grazing. It was death by a hundred cuts - regulatory government managers kept land instituting ever more onerous environmental regulations that made grazing sheep and cattle on public land uneconomical. worked - at one time, there were 40 million sheep in the US, mainly in the West. Today, a hundred later, less than 9 million remain.

Ironically, removing grazing animals and suppressing fires have caused mountain meadows to become infested with invasive aspen trees, weeds and brush. Now, there is a train of thought that the solution may be returning sheep grazing those infested meadows to preserve the ecology. But it's too late; changing markets and government conservation policies have driven almost all of the old sheep ranching families out of the business. The irony of

Answer: Turkey

I am a singer-songwriter born in Canada on November 5, 1959. As a child, I traveled to different places with my father, who was a diplomat. I've had many hit songs, but my work on the soundrack for a Robin Hood movie really set my career ablaze.

BOUVIER - Lillian Bouvier passed away peacefully with family at her side on Oct 31, 2024 in Brooks, Alberta, at the age of 90 years. She was born in Montmartre, Saskatchewan, on April 9, 1934.

Lillian (Warbeck) married Andre Bouvier in 1954. They moved to Brooks in 1958 where they stayed and raised their family of four girls. She was the secretary at St. Mary's Catholic Church for 12 years. Because of her skill with numbers, she was the bookkeeper for Andre's businesses and other organizations. However, she mostly dedicated her time to being a mom and grandmother and helping others.

Lillian was involved in church and community groups, such the Parish Council, Catholic Women's League, Brooks Majorettes, Girl Guides, TOPS and Pet Visitation. She was a board member for the Preventative Social Services, the forerunner to FCSS, and was most proud of her role in the formation of SPEC.

She enjoyed traveling, reading, music, playing cards, TV, movies and loved live theatre.

Lillian was a beloved mother, grandmother and great grandmother, and will be deeply missed by family and friends. Lillian lived a life filled with kindness, laughter, and unwavering support for those around her.

Lillian is predeceased by her mother and father and stepmother, her husband of 58 years, and a stepsister. She is survived by four daughters: Charmaine (Bruce) Loewen, Janice (Bill) Swenson, Rita (Dean Baxter) and Denise Bouvier; seven grandchildren: Kris (Erin) Loewen, Jonathan (Megan) Loewen, Erika Loewen, Candice Loewen, Katelynne (Tom) Devine, Paige (Jeremy) Pal, and Haileigh (Erik) Hann; and eleven great-grandchildren. She is also survived by two stepsisters Gina (Terry) Conroy and Dianne (Tom) McKinnon, and Maura (O'Connor) Musgrove who grew up like a fifth daughter to Lillian.

We would like to thank Dr. Thomson, Brooks Home Care and the team at Pharmasave for their help along her journey. Each and every personal caregiver who played a role in making Lillian's last year's comfortable holds a special place in our hearts.
A Funeral Service will be held at St. Mary's Church on Thursday, November 7, 2024 at 2 pm. A memorial tribute and lunch to follow at the St Mary's Parish Hall.

If friends desire, donations in Lillian's memory can be made to SPEC at 101 – 327 3rd St. W. Brooks, AB T1R 0E7.

The Brooks Bulletin has a selection of verses and memorial tributes to remember your loved ones with.

Sample verses: Mother or Siste

On year has passed since that sad day, When one we loved was called away, God took her home, it was His will, But in our hearts she liveth still.

Father or Brother

We often think of days gone by When we were all together, A shadow o'er our lives has cast, Our loved one gone forever.

Wife or Daughter

No one knows our heartaches, Only those who have lost can tell Of the grief that we bear in silence For the one we loved so well. Husband or Son Nothing can ever take away The love a heart holds dear. Fond memories linger every day, Remembrance keeps him near.

Child

He has gone to be an angel, Secure in our Father's care, And his dear little feet now patter along
The beautiful streets up there.

Friend or Kin We cannot, Lord, They purpose see. But all is well that's done by thee.

A mother shows her son how to correctly switch off the smoking stove in the Brooks Fire Department's fire simulator which was unveiled during the fire hall open house on Saturday. The learning tool has numerous features including smoke detectors, smoke that rises from the toaster, a pot that has been left on the stove, the oven and a propane BBQ. The fires are extinguished when they are fought correctly from putting a lid back on the pot to turning off the oven. If there is an oven fire you should never open the door. | SANDRA M STANWAY PHOTO
