Bandits earn both home game wins over the weekend; four games remain in regular season

With just four games remaining in the BCHL hockey schedule and four points separating the first place Penticton Vees and the second place Brooks Bandits, the regular season is winding down and fans are days away from adding Progression of the playoffs will lead to the final game, the Fred Page Cup Championship likely to be held in May or even June.

Since the beginning of the month Penticton has won all four of their matches for eight points while the Bandits, who are four points Bandits 4-1 on March 7. The weekend games saw Parker Lalonde continue with his point streak having

City not breaking any law in releasing tender amounts

SANDRA M STANWAY BROOKS BULLETIN

The city will not be breaking any contractual law if they release all tender amounts for any project as was stated by the city's finance manager Bill McKennan during a council committee meeting in February.

McKennan said that he is updating the purchasing policy.

That change would potentially remove bid results from the purview of elected officials and the public.

According to Kevin Lee, press secretary for Ric McIvor, minister of Municipal Affairs, the "The Municipal Government Act (MGA) provides locally elected municipal councils in Alberta with the responsibility and autonomy to address a broad range of local issues. "This includes the establishment of procurement policies and processes to ensure consistent and fair opportunities for vendors submitting tenders.

"There are provisions in place that ensure this process is transparent so municipal residents are aware of council decisions regarding expenditures and have the information necessary to hold them accountable for their decisions."

In other words, Lee said, it is up to each municipality to set a policy to keep tenders either public or private.

Mayor John Petrie told The Bulletin he realizes there's some inadequacies in that.

"It is coming back to the table. I think all the councillors want to see the tendering process," he said.

A couple of projects for Lake Newell Resort

SANDRA M STANWAY

BROOKS BULLETIN In addition to pathway construction at Lake Newell Resort, the county anticipates rehabilitating Blue Heron and White Pelican roads this summer.

Mark Harbicht, the county's manager of municipal services, told council there will be impact to residents accessing their property during the road rehabilitation.

He said the roads have reached the end of life so the county will complete a road surface and structure replacement, upgrade curbs, gutters and swales and inspect the water curb stops.

The municipality had preferred to award the tender after receiving government approval to use Canada Community-Building Fund (CCBF) (aka gas tax) to cover the project overage.

However, with no word either way and the early March meeting as the final one to make a decision, council, by a recorded vote of 9-1, agreed to award Brooks Asphalt.

If the county does not get the okay to use CCBF funds, they will be taken from the infrastructure reserve. Those removed funds will not hold up or affect any other current project. In the event that the grant funding does come through CAO Matt Fenske said the money will be used for another project under CCBF.

2025 COYOTE INCENTIVE PROGRAM

DEADLINE APPROACHING

Managing Coyote Populations in Newell: A Balanced Approach

Coyotes are a key part of our local ecosystem, but when their numbers rise too high, they can put wildlife, livestock, and public safety at risk. That's why we're taking a proactive, responsible approach to population management.

Since December 1, 2024, we've been offering a $20 incentive per coyote managed under this program. The deadline for the program is March 31. Bring coyotes to the Shop attached to the County Administration building, where an ear will be clipped for verification, and you'll receive your payment. Proper disposal remains your responsibility.

This program is open to County of Newell residents, urban residents within County boundaries, and landowners/managers in the area. Only coyotes taken within the County of Newell qualify.

Let's work together to keep our community and environment in balance! For more information, contact the County of Newell

INVASIVE WEED ALERT

DOWNY BROME TAKE ACTION NOW!

There is no one-size-fits-all approach to stopping Downy Brome, but combining can be effective:

MOWING: Cut before seeds mature (when they look silver). Always clean your mowerl

HAND-PULLING: Works for small patches-remove plants before they seed. HERBICIDES: Apply late fall or early spring for best results.

PLANT COMPETITION: Establish perennial grasses to outcompete Downy Brome.

Every action counts! Let's work together to protect our rangelands from this aggressive invader.

The County's Agricultural Service Board is here to help in identification and prevention. Contact us at 403-362-3266.

With spring right around the corner, you may notice that some clean up around your property is needed. Bylaw 2074-24 requires property owners to maintain their premises and avoid unsightly conditions. This includes proper disposal of waste and upkeep of buildings.

Let's keep our County beautiful!

The County of Newell Council is considering amendments to the County's Fire Bylaw which has received First Reading. Public input is requested before it's given additional consideration by Council.

AGRICULTURAL SAFETY WEEK March 16-22, 2025

Farming & Mental Health -

Farming is more than a job-it's a way of life. But with long hours, unpredictable challenges, and a physically demanding workload, farmers experience some of the highest levels of stress among professions. What often goes unnoticed is the direct impact mental health has on farm safety.

Studies show that fatigue, stress, and dehydration all play a role in workplace accidents. Farmers experiencing high levels of stress or burnout may be more likely to cut corners, ignore safety procedures, or struggle with decision-making. These small lapses can have life-altering consequences.

Key Areas of Concern

Fatigue & Sleep Deprivation

- Lack of sleep affects focus, memory, and reaction time.
 - Sleep-deprived farmers are at a higher risk of machinery accidents and misjudging hazards.

Hydration & Mental Clarity

• Dehydration leads to reduced cognitive function, slower reaction times, and increased anxiety.

Chronic Stress & Decision-Making

- Constant work pressure can lead to anxiety and depression, making it harder to stay alert and proactive.
- Short breaks and activities outside of farming help alleviate stress and improve overall well-being.

Physical Health & Its Mental Impact

- Exposure to farm hazards can cause long-term health issues like joint injuries and respiratory problems.
- These conditions often contribute to mental health struggles, increasing stress and the likelihood of mistakes.

Solutions for a Safer, Healthier Farm

- Prioritize sleep: Set a schedule and stick to it when possible.
- Hydrate regularly: Keep water accessible and track intake, especially in hot conditions.
- Seek balance: Even short breaks improve mental clarity and prevent burnout.
- Talk about mental health: Support networks and professional help can make a difference.

Mental health and farm safety are closely connected. By recognizing and addressing these risks, farmers can protect both their well-being and their livelihood.

Alberta offers a wide range of resources to support farmers facing mental health challenges. SCAN THE CODE

Grasslands seeks land for new school

SANDRA M STANWAY BROOKS BULLETIN

Grasslands School Division has asked the city for property for a new school.

The school board is seeking the land as a future school site to construct an elementary school along 4th Avenue East. The parcel is 28688.65 square metres.

"This is going to be our number two priority on our upcoming capital plan. I see this being a few years out but (it) depends on growth within our city," said Rhian Schroeder, assistant superintendant at Grasslands.

The city is expected to make their decision at the next committee meeting.

The fully serviced property is south of the French school and could provide an opportunity for the two schools to share outdoor park space.

Councillor Mohammed Idriss asked why the same property was not discussed when council was considering the new Christ the Redeemer school.

"Why wasn't it presented to us when we were considering space for (the Catholic School)?," he asked. The question was not answered. "I'm going to leave it there. I think that debate is over with. A good question, there but we're not getting into another debate on this," mayor John Petrie responded.

Councillor Marissa Wardrop said the old rodeo grounds, "was the only parcel we were aware of."

City council was reportedly pressured during an in-camera meeting to give the 24-acre old rodeo grounds to the Catholic School. The property will not be subdivided.

"I just don't want to rush into designating a site hastily without all the information, again," Wardrop said.

She generally agreed that a letter of intent could be written.

If a decision is made to give the school board the property it is expected that the city will maintain control by designating it as a Municipal School Reserve until a final plan is available. Gavin Scott, the city's land planner, was asked if council could change their mind and give the property to someone else.

"If you begin down the road of making deals with others, it would be a question how much flack you want to take," he said.

He said it could be done but working with the division another comparable property would have to be provided.

During the Catholic School public hearing Scott said schools are no longer being built in residential areas.

Last week councillor Joel Goodnough highlighted the fact that the proposed Grasslands site will be in a residential area.

"There's some great benefits," he said.

Last week topsoil was removed in preparation for construction of the new Brooks Junior High School. The school will be built on the site of the football field. When it is completed the current school will be demolished to make way for a multi-use field. | SANDRA M STANWAY PHOTO

WARDLOW - Things have been pretty quiet here in Wardlow, we had a teaser of spring but got knocked back to reality with the wind and a bit of snow last week. I must say that I have had a job, trying to get something done.

I'm happy to report that the Prairie Girl Cook House in Cessford is reopening next week, it will be nice to have that option again. Be sure to check the hours before you head on out. Looks to me like they will be open every day but Sunday and Monday. Good food and company always there.

John has been busy trying to arrange our next AGM for the Western Canadian Wheelwright Association to take place in August . This year we are planning to go to Cardston Carriage Museum. Looking into the area there is so much there and close by to see and do, and the area is so beautiful too.

Plans for Silver Sage include campground and hall

SANDRA M STANWAY BROOKS BULLETIN

The Silver Sage Agribition is looking to partner with the community as a whole to help see their plan come to fruition over the next few years.

Ken Neufeld, president, told city council committee last week that they would like to construct an event centre and would like the city to help determine the size, a campground, a staging area for the walking path and relocating the riding area. There is also a need to replace the arena roof but their initial request is for water and sewer.

"That's going to be our first one," said Neufeld.

"We're always looking as an Ag. Society to say, 'what's our economic impact? How do we assess it? How do we get local recognition for what we do?" he said.

He said there is potential to do a lot more than what is currently in place.

"We want to work with the region, partner with tourism and see what that looks like," said Neufeld. He said grants are being applied for and there is the opportunity for in-kind donations as matching grants.

At the March meeting of the Eastern Irrigation District board, members agreed to donate and transfer about 106.3 acres to Silver Sage for $1.

Surveying and associated costs are to be covered by Silver Sage.

The board will further discuss the transfer and donation during their April meeting.

CLARIFICATION

In the Silver Sage story last week it should have stated that the Agricultural Society requested the attendance of a county councillor as a non-voting member at their board meetings. Council denied the request to allow a councillor to be paid to attend meetings.

In 2022, following a mass resignation of the board and the Alberta Association of Agricultural Societies (AAAS) taking it over until a new board was elected, the county accepted a request from the AAAS to help the board with guidance and mentorship. A year later, when the board was stable and on track, the county ended their involvement as a function of council.

An unnamed 29-year-old male, who cannot be named as charges have not been sworn, was charged with firearms offences and is scheduled to appear in court on April 30.

The e-bike was located abandoned in an alley.

An unrelated firearms search warrant was executed the following day at about 9 a.m. in the Sunnylea area.

"During the search of the residence an SKS rifle was recovered with 50 rounds of ammunition readily accessible," stated a police report.

There was also additional ammunition seized in the residence along with numerous replica firearms and a large bowie knife that Fernando Echeverria, 25, of Brooks was charged with possessing ammunition and a knife contrary to a weapons prohibition and release orders.

Siguenza was released from custody following a bail hearing and Echeverria was remanded until his next appearance in court.

COMMENT Carney to lead Canada after trying for years to defund it

The soon-to-be prime minister's plan for net-zero banking would have devastated the country

ROSS MCKITRICK

NATIONAL POST

Conservative leader Pierre Poilievre is very concerned about financial conflicts of interest that new Liberal leader (and our next prime minister) Mark Carney may be hiding. But I'm far more concerned about the one out in the open: Carney is now supposed to act for the good of the country after lobbying to defund and drive out of existence Canada's oil and gas companies, steel companies, car companies and any other sector dependent on fossil fuels. He's done this through the Glasgow Financial Alliance for Net Zero (GFANZ), which he founded in 2021.

Carney is a climate zealot. He may try to fool Canadians into thinking he wants new pipelines, liquified natural gas (LNG) terminals and other hydrocarbon infrastructure, but he doesn't. Far from it. He wants half the existing ones gone by 2030 and the rest soon after.

He has said so, repeatedly and emphatically. He believes that the world "must achieve about a 50 per cent reduction in emissions by 2030" and "rapidly scale climate solutions to provide cleaner, more affordable, and more reliable replacements for unabated fossil fuels." (By "unabated" he means usage without full carbon capture, which in practice is virtually all cases.) And since societies don't seem keen on doing this, Carney created GFANZ to pressure banks, insurance companies and investment firms to cut off financing for recalcitrant firms.

"This transition to net zero requires companies across the whole economy to change behaviors through application of innovative technologies and new ways of doing business" he wrote in 2022 with his GFANZ co-chairs, using bureaucratic euphemisms to make his radical agenda somehow seem normal.

The GFANZ plan they articulated that year put companies into four categories. Those selling green technologies or engaged in work that displaces fossil fuels would be rewarded with financing from member institutions. Those still using fossil fuels, or have investments in others that do, but are committed to being "climate leaders" and have set a path to net-zero, would also still be eligible for financing, as would those that do business with "high-emitting firms" but plan to reach net-zero targets on approved timelines. Companies that own or invest in high-emitting assets, however, would operate under a "managed phaseout" regime and could even be cut off from investment capital.

What are "high-emitting assets"? Carney's group hasn't released a complete list, but a June 2022 report listed some examples: coal mines, fossil-fuel power stations, oil fields, gas pipelines, steel mills, ships, cement plants and consumer gasoline-powered vehicles. GFANZ envisions a future in which the finance sector either severs all connections to such assets or puts them under a "managed phaseout" regime, which means exactly what it sounds like.

So when Carney jokingly suggested it won't matter if his climate plan drives up costs for steel mills because people don't buy steel, he could have added that there likely won't be any steel mills before long anyway. If his work as prime minister echoes his work as GFANZ chair, we can expect steel mills to be phased out, along with cars, gas-fired power plants, pipelines, oil wells and so forth.

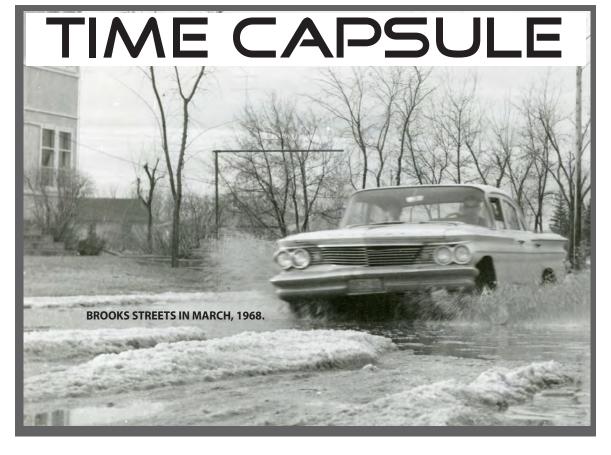

GFANZ boasts at length about its members strong-arming clients into embracing net-zero. For instance, it extols British insurance multinational Aviva for its climate engagement escalation program: "Aviva is prepared to send a message to all companies through voting actions when those companies do not have adequate climate plans or do not act quickly enough."

To support these coercive goals, Carney's lobbying helped secure a requirement in Canada for banks, life insurance companies, trust and loan companies and others to develop and file reports disclosing their "climate transition risk," set out by the federal Office of the Superintendent of Financial Institutions (OSFI).

The rule, Guideline B-15 on Climate Risk Management, was initially published in 2023 and requires federally regulated financial institutions (other than foreign bank branches) to conduct extensive and costly research into their holdings to determine whether value may be at risk from future climate policies. The vagueness and potential liabilities created by this menacing set of expectations could push Canada's largest investment firms to eventually decide it's easier to divest altogether from fossil fuel and heavy industry sectors, furthering Carney's ultimate goal.

Yet Carney will become prime minister just when Canadians face a trade crisis that requires the construction of new coastal energy infrastructure to ensure our fossil fuel commodities can be exported without going through the United States. He has said he would take emergency measures to support "energy projects," but I assume he means windmills and solar panels. He has not (to my knowledge) said he supports pipelines, LNG terminals, fracking wells or new refineries. Unless he disowns everything he has said for years, we must assume he doesn't.

Canadian journalists should insist he clear this up. Ask Carney if he supports the repeal of OSFI's Climate Risk Management guideline. Show Carney his GFANZ report. Ask him, "Do you still endorse the contents of this document?" If he says yes, ask him how we can build new pipelines and LNG terminals, expand our oil and gas sector, run our electricity grid using Canadian natural gas, heat our homes and put gasoline in our cars if banks are to phase these activities out. If he tries to claim he no longer endorses it, ask him when he changed his mind, and why we should believe him now. The media must not allow Carney to be evasive or ambiguous on these matters. We don't have time for a bait-and-switch prime minister. If Carney still believes the rhetoric he published through GFANZ, he should say so openly, so Canadians can assess whether he really is the right man to address our current crisis. Ross McKitrick is a professor of economics at the University of Guelph and a senior fellow of the Fraser Institute

Maybe a Short Ceasefire, Maybe Not

What's hard to keep in mind, with all the hype that's flying around, is that there's no particular reason for either side in the Ukraine war to want a ceasefire right now, let alone a full peace settlement. The only one who's in a hurry is Donald Trump, and that's just because he's terminally impatient.

The war, which has just passed its third anniversary, is as deeply stuck in the mud as the First World War that it so closely resembles. The Russians use their huge numerical superiority to make small advances at great cost in Russian lives, but at their rate of advance during the past year they would only be nearing the outskirts of Kyiv some time in early 2029.

That does not mean that the current war of attrition will last until 2029; just that nobody can confidently predict the winner now. It could come at any point when there is a drastic change of circumstances on either side: a mutiny in the army, a change of government at home, even some third party joining the fight.

In the meantime each side hangs on, plays its allotted role in the attritional war (much higher Russian casualties but very slow Ukrainian retreat), and waits for the unforeseeable but eventually almost inevitable shift in circumstances to happen. After that, usually, things happen very fast and you have a decisive outcome in a matter of months. Senior Ukrainian and Russian officers will almost all have been educated in the old Soviet military tradition even if they are too young to have served in that defunct army, and will have passed on this wisdom (if that's what it is) to their respective civilian superiors. They will do what they can in the meanwhile, but they are really waiting for something to change.

And then along comes Trump with a completely different set of motivations and expectations. For him, what kind of peace deal he creates is irrelevant so long as it wins him the Nobel Peace Prize.

Trump was outraged when Barak Obama was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize in the first minutes of his presidency in 2009 ("for nothing," as Trump rightly pointed out). There may be a racial element in this, but the injustice of Obama getting the prize when Trump didn't get one has been a frequent feature at his rallies ever since (most recently last October).

"They gave Obama the Nobel Prize," Trump told the Las Vegas audience. "He didn't even know why the hell he got it, right? He still doesn't. He got elected and they announced he's getting the Nobel Prize. I got elected in a much bigger, better, crazier election, but they gave him the Nobel Prize."

For whatever reason, Trump badly wants the Nobel Peace Prize, and he wants it NOW. Once inaugurated, he created an artificial deadline for a ceasefire, claiming that Ukraine had to agree because it had 'no cards' and was doomed to lose the war. Ukraine's President Volodymyr Zelensky knew better, but would have lost some Western sympathy if he said so. Naive people of good will often take the position that any war must end as soon as possible – especially in faraway places they know little about – because then the dying will stop.

But people who seek to gain by war don't want to stop until they get what they want, and the people they attacked don't want to stop so long as there's some chance of getting back what they lost.

Or would you rather have frozen World War 2 in mid-1942? (Germans in France and at the gates of Moscow, the Holocaust gearing up, and most of East and Southeast Asia under Japanese occupation.)

So Zelensky insisted on preconditions before entering peace talks, whereupon Trump lost it. He ruthlessly cut off the flow of American arms, aid and intelligence information to Ukraine, knowing that in the short run Zelensky could not replace them fully with supplies from sympathetic European states. Zelensky caved, as he had to.

Why is Trump in such a tearing rush? Perhaps for the same reason that he is usually rude and insulting: to unbalance the other side. "It's like hitting a mule with a two-by-four across the nose," his special Envoy on Russia and Ukraine General Keith Kellog explained. "You get their attention." Or maybe he was just born that way.

However, by the end of last week a parade of Western diplomatic and Ukrainian advisers had convinced Zelensky that accepting Trump's ceasefire proposal would probably do no harm. If Putin is still on top of his game, he will agree to the thirty-day ceasefire, knowing full well that the subsequent negotiations will probably collapse quite fast.

And Trump can relax: the next Nobel Peace Prize will not be announced until October.

City to host Canada Day festivities indoors

SANDRA M STANWAY BROOKS BULLETIN

The majority of the city's Canada Day event will be held indoors to help make it easier for city staff and volunteers.

Last year's event was held inside due to rain, however, the rain didn't last too long.

In her report to city committee, Mareissa Christman, the city's program coordinator, told council that last year's indoor event resulted in a "significantly improved experience for staff, vendors and volunteers."

She said the airconditioned facilities provided staff and volunteers with comfortable break areas and staff were able to maintain cleanliness more efficiently.

She said there would still be outdoor elements, such as soccer and fireworks, but the majority would be held indoors.

Mayor John Petrie said, "It worked out really good having it indoors. It will eliminate the elements of wind and rain and maybe snow at the time of the year."

Prior to COVID the Canada Day event in Brooks started at the museum with a pancake breakfast and antique tractor parade and then it moved to Duke of Sutherland for a full day of activities, a movie and fireworks, however, a lack of volunteers resulted in the removal of the pancake breakfast and parade.

There has been some events in the park but the movie has also been cancelled over the years because the outdoor screen has not been able to stand up to the wind.

Councillor Joel Goodnough said having the event outside is a festival atmosphere while indoors is very loud.

"It's an excitement. It would be nice to see something (outdoors)," he said.

Petrie agreed about the outdoor festival atmosphere but also reiterated that the elements play a part.

"Is there a way we can introduce some of that element at JBS?" wondered councillor Mohammed Idriss.

The bouncy castles could be placed on the north side of the facility.

Councillor Jon Nesbitt said he enjoyed the event indoors last year and he doesn't believe it would be easy to move everything inside if it is raining.

"We want the ambience outside but we know the importance of the inside," said Petrie.

The pool will remain open as per its usual holiday hours but it will not include free access.

New fee schedule includes CDC South lease prices

SANDRA M STANWAY BROOKS BULLETIN

County council has updated fee schedule which includes fees for its managerial takeover of the Crop Diversification Centre on April 1 and road allowance closure and leases requested by the Eastern Irrigation District in support of the reservoirs.

The fees for CDC include lease rates for land, office space, storage and greenhouse as well as labour and park space.

Through the schedule, the EID is exempt from application fees related to the closure and lease of road allowances for their reservoirs and the annual lease rate per mile for road allowances.

CAO Matt Fenske told council that David Hoekstra from the province, who has been working as a strategic advisor on the CDC file, found that a control system that was thought needed replacement can be repaired.

"That saved us $750,000. Apparently that system is still serviceable," said Fenske.

"We're confident there's going to be room for cost efficiencies over there," he said.

The province's budget included about $3 million for capital to take care of the deferred maintenance at the site.

"We're optimistic we've got some runway to get this thing off the ground."

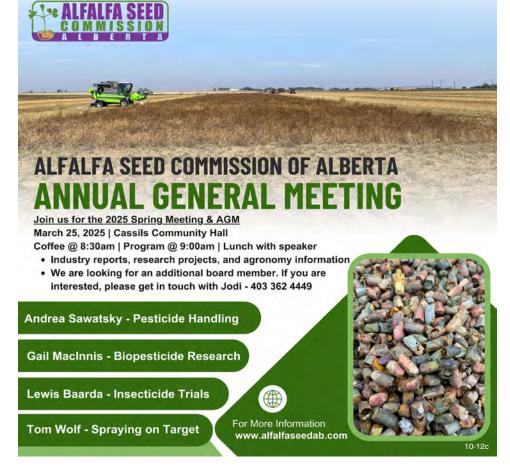

The CDC committee also went through cost estimates based on 100 per cent lease and lower.

At an earlier meeting administration estimated that the county could be responsible for about $800,000 if everything wasn't rented but that has been revised to $450,000 as a worst case scenario.

"In the best case scenario we run a little bit of a surplus and that doesn't include all the revenue lines that we intend to be charging for, so cost recovery for any county or Alberta Agriculture staff time, those will be revenue lines not included in the model."

The county will lease a vehicle and equipment from Alberta Ag and that will be charged back at roadbuilders guide rates.

The county will take over the facility as management on April 1 and there is lease interest for the land.

Trump exposes fairweather friends... he may dismantle EU non-tariff trade barriers

WILL VERBOVEN

It would seem that when it comes to traderelated issues between countries, there is little empathy, only vested national interests. So it showed when President Trump threatened crippling tariffs on Canada. The silence was deafening from our so-called friends and allies in the European Union(EU) and the G7 group. Even the British Prime Minister, on a visit to the Trump Palace, seemed to throw Canada under the bus. Not a word of sympathy either for his beleaguered Canadian subjects from Charles the 3rd, the reigning King Of Canada. Those might be wise political positions, as the EU and the UK probably don't want to raise the ire of a reactionary

Trump if they showed any support for a country he was targeting for tariff retribution. But then again, for the EU, it won't matter as it now seems that trading block will soon be Trump's next target. In some ways, the EU could use Trump-imposed some corrective actions, particularly regarding several of their unfair anti-free market trading practices. The ones Canadian agriculture is most familiar with are the EU's obsession with using non-tariff trade barriers to keep out unwanted competition for large sectors of their production agriculture industry. Even free-trade agreements don't matter in these situations as the Canada/EU treaty has shown.

It is an old story, but the EU has spent decades deviously creating trade barriers based on bogus, non-scientific, politically inspired green ideology.

That would be their fear and opposition to GMOs, steroids and hormones. That negatively affects Canadian beef, corn, and oilseed exports to the EU. The EU has fought and lost WTO unfair trade challenges but to no avail as they are cunningly skilled at inventing ever new ways to block competing imports. Because of the boy scout nature of our trade policy, Canada will not robustly deal with this outrageous EU trade obstructionism. But then, as a medium player in world trade, we don't carry a very big stick.

But luckily for Canada, the EU applied the same non-tariff barriers against the USA, and if Trump carries through with his tariff threats against the EU, they are about to get a rude awakening. Trump has indicated that his reciprocal tariffs against the EU will also include action against bogus non-tariff barriers against products like US beef, grains, and oilseeds. That would be a great leap forward in finally breaking down that sham barrier. If that were to happen, it would presumably have to apply to Canadian exports of those commodities to the EU.

Unfortunately, the UK has joined their former comrades in the EU in maintaining that they have a right to protect their citizens from consuming deadly food products from Canada and the US that contain the much-feared GMOs and growth supplements. Neither has been able to scientifically prove that those are a health risk. Otherwise, they would have had to publically was forbid their warn or citizens from eating almost any food product whilst visiting Canada or the USA. Incidentally, most cruise ships worldwide serve American beef, even those visiting EU seaports. There are few reports of British and EÚ cruise participants refusing a US ribeye steak to save their lives. The exasperating part of the UK ban on Canadian beef is that Canada happily allows unlimited access to the Canadian market for British beef, which has increased 300% over the past few years. One wonders why anyone would want to eat British beef instead of Alberta beef, but I guess if it's cheap enough, some consumers will lower their quality and taste standards.

Canada needs to retaliate (but won't) and suspend all UK beef imports, pending whether their processing facilities and sanitation procedures meet our health standards. We could make them pay inspections for the and take our time doing it. God knows Canadian bureaucrats are world-famous for mind-numbing, timeconsuming health environmental and assessments - it could take years. However, to make the Canadian government bend to their will the UK has suspended free trade agreement discussions. Canada will eventually surrender to the demand to get a deal.

But, as noted earlier, if President Trump forces the EU and the UK to end their notorious nontariff barriers against beef, corn and oilseeds, it would change the attitude of those nefarious EU and UK trade officials who for decades have gleefully had us at their mercy with their bogus claims about our high-quality beef. Trump will prove it was all about keeping out the competition.

A Spanish captain was walking on his ship's deck when a soldier rushed up to him and exclaimed, "An enemy ship is approaching us!" The captain replied calmly, "Go get my red shirt." The soldier got the shirt for the captain. The enemy ship came in and heavy rounds of fire were exchanged. Finally, the Spaniards won. The soldier asked, "Congrats sir, but why the red shirt?" The captain replied, "If I got injured, my blood shouldn't be seen, as I didn't want my men to lose hope." BASSANO - Sure is a good week for the two Chapman families with Edward & Melanie and Ed & Rosemary celebrating wedding anniversaries this week. Happy anniversaries!!!

I see where Duchess Bethel Mennonite Church will be at Playfair Lodge tonight, March 19th. I don't see any birthdays this month at the lodge.

Speaking of birthdays for the next few days, there are quite a few celebrating their special day. Birthday wishes to Dan Ballance, Rose Pask, Les Lunseth, Daniel Branson, Ty Barlow, Joanne Saunders, Cheryl Lassiter, Edward Schaffer, Ryan Barlow, Sandra Beddows, Hadley and Morgan Marks.

Yes, you heard it correctly!!! The March Equinox, also known as the first day of Spring, does occur on March 20th. On the vernal equinox, the Sun will cross the celestial equator from north to south at that time early in the morning. Forget about March 21st unless you believe in reincarnation and went to check back in during the 22nd century.

I did not receive the names of the winning teams from the Mixed Curling Bonspiel in time for our deadline. They will be posted locally.

HILDENBRAND - Virginia Hildenbrand

April 5, 1926 ~ March 12, 2025 Virginia Lorraine Hildenbrand (nee Anderson), a mother, grandmother, а caring great grandmother, sister, aunt and friend, passed away peacefully at AgeCare Sunrise Gardens in Brooks, Alberta, on Wednesday, March 12, 2025, at the age of 98 years. Virginia was born in Brooks on April 5, 1926, the first of five children to Fred and Olivia Anderson. She spent most of her early life on the farm in Scandia, helping with her four younger siblings as well as the home and farm chores while attending Jenny Lind School. Virginia was also an accomplished pianist and vocalist, singing in numerous choirs over the years. She enjoyed singing in church choirs, especially the opportunity to sing with her Anderson family at Salem Lutheran Church in Scandia.

Jim and Virginia were married in 1948, moving to Taber shortly thereafter. This is where they spent the majority of their married life, raising their family while contributing to the social and economic life in Taber. While in Taber, they spent a number of their retirement winters in Yuma, Arizona.

In their later years, Jim and Virginia moved to Medicine Hat where she continued to enjoy canning and baking, journaling, quilting and especially sharing her highly popular cinnamon rolls and ginger snaps, the recipes for which have been passed down.

Jim passed in 2008, while they were living in Medicine Hat. Thereafter, Virginia found companionship with Edwin Deering, and they spent a number of years together until her health necessitated another move. This time, she moved back to her old stomping grounds in Brooks to AgeCare Sunrise Gardens where she spent her last years respectfully and warmly cared for by a wonderful staff as well as her loving nieces, nephews and extended family. Family wish to thank everyone for the care, love and understanding Virginia received over her many years, some of which were not easy.

Virginia was predeceased by her parents; three brothers, Kermith, Ron and Doug; son, Robert and husband, James. She is survived by her sister, Elaine; sister-in-law, Carol; son, Don (Henny) and daughter, Deb (Bryan). She is also survived by Grandchildren, Scott (Krista); Erik (Victoria); Corina (Trevor) and Taylor (Hannah); great-grandchildren, Olivia, Naomi and Eve Gelmon and their father Michael; Izayeh Tomczyk, Nathaniel, Eliza and Madeline Hildebrand.

Heaven has received another deserving member of the team of walking and whistling angels. Virginia's celebration of life will be held at a later date. One Tree World

ONE TREE – Gee, we had Spring like weather last week and here we are with snow again and quiet cold last few nights with temperatures down to -10 C. Now we have snow, but at least hopefully it won't last long. There was a fair dump on Sunday morning, so a lot of pushing snow off from in front of the house. But I think it's supposed to warm up later this week.

NOTEThe Brooks United Church THRIFT Sale is THIS Thursday, March 20th from 8:00am to 12:30pm. Everyone is welcome to attend and see if you can find things you think you need.

Ourdeepestsympathies go to the families of Vera May Bunn, who passed away on February 18, 2025 in the Brooks Health Centre at the age of 86 years. Our thoughts and prayers are with all the families at this sad time. The Celebration of Life" for Vera Bunn will be held on Friday, March 28, 2025 at 2:00pm in the Brooks United Church with Pastor Janice Whitelock and Reverend Esther Crews officiating.

Vera was a former One Tree resident many years ago in the 1960's and was my neighbour for a few years until she and her husband George moved to the town of Brooks to make their home. Vera and I both belonged to the Farm Women of Unifarm and she and I took turns at being either secretary or president of the One Tree organization for several years.

On the 6th Barbara Mahrer went to Lethbridge to her daughter Carina's place to baby-sit her grandkids there while mom and dad went on a holiday. They came home last weekend and then husband Thomas her went down to Lethbridge also, to help Stephen and Nick celebrate their joint birthdays on Sunday. While there on Saturday evening Thomas and Barbara attended a dance there. They were going to return home later Sunday evening.

On Saturday Charlotte Noronha went to Drumheller to be with her family, Corey and Jessica and family on Sunday to help her celebrate her birthday (which is on Tuesday). She was returning home on Tuesday.

Karl and Linda Slomp went down to Lethbridge on Sunday to pick up (Sandra and Matt's kids) their grandsons to stay with them till Tuesday, as they don't have school.

Birthday greetings for the coming week go out to Dallas Alberts, who'll be a teenager on Mar. 20th; to Val Juss on Mar. 21st; to Betty (Slomp) Parent of Edmonton and to Brett Bunney of Duchess, both on Mar. 22nd. We wish each of you a great day and a "Very Happy Birthday" and to everyone else that is celebrating a birthday. We wish everyone all the best in the years ahead.

Happy anniversary wishes go out to Brian and Lorene Nichols of Brooks on March 21st and to my niece Corey (Merkl) and Michael Meyer of Chestermere on Mar. 26th. We wish both couples' much happiness and good health for many years to come together and we wish them all the very best of everything.

"The Lighter Side"

A little boy surprised his mom on Mother's Day morning with a cup of coffee in bed. He made it himself and was so proud, so he waited until she finished the whole cup.

She had never had such a bad cup of coffee before! As she forced down the last sip, she noticed three little army men in the bottom of the cup.

"Honey," she asked, "Why did you put your army men in the coffee?"

Her son replied: "It's like on TV. "The best part of waking up is soldiers in you cup."
